

Angela Lee

about the artist

Angela has always been an avid photo-enthusiast. At Stanford University, USA, she scored distinctions in the photography module, (and literature), and was strongly encouraged by the Photography H.O.D. to pursue it further.

In the year 2007, she received the Merit Award for her photography art series 'Flowerism' (inspired by Impressionism) at the Asia Photo Awards.

Knowledgeable in both the traditional and digital darkrooms and processes, she believes that while technicalities are important, they are only tools and that the spirit of the scene should not be forgotten in the mechanics.

She has participated in group exhibitions and her works are in private collections and an art museum. She is a freelance photographer (and writer).

She also works as a consultant providing cost-effective I.T., web, and digital imaging solutions and services.
